The opening marks another exciting milestone in the return of Bed Bath & Beyond stores, bringing one of America's most recognized home retail brands back to the communities and customers who have known and loved it for generations.

Spanning 19,000 square feet, the new Glendale location brings back the familiar Bed Bath & Beyond shopping experience, refreshed for today's homes and lifestyles. Thoughtfully merchandised by room and occasion, the store features everything from the iconic towel wall and beautifully made beds to kitchen gadgets, storage and organization, and home décor. "Bed Bath & Beyond is a brand that generations of customers have welcomed into their homes, and we're excited to bring it back to their neighborhoods," said Amy Sullivan, President of Neighborhood Intelligence, Inc. "We're bringing back the things customers have always loved, from the iconic shopping experience to the brands, products, and value they remember, while introducing new ways to help customers make the most of every room in their home. These planned openings are part of Neighborhood Intelligence's broader Everything Home strategy, connecting customers with trusted retail brands, home products, and services through an expanding network of neighborhood stores and digital experiences.

"Our stores are about more than a transaction. They're about being part of the communities we serve," Sullivan added. "We want customers to rediscover Bed Bath & Beyond, find the things they love, and have a reason to come back again and again. That's how we build lasting relationships with our customers and stronger businesses in every neighborhood."
